WE LOOK FOR JOYS TO COME

2. But sweet to those alone to whom the Lord is known;to whom the Saviour's name is dear.And why to them so sweet?Because they hope to meet the Saviour, whom they trust to here.

5. But this the wonder is, that with a hope like this our minds should still so carnal be. Forgive, O Lord, forgive, and suffer us to live, and henceforth let us follow thee.

3. They hope to see his face, to sing his pow'r and grace with all the ransomed saints above.To see him as he is, to be with him and his, and never, never to remove.

6. Our strength, O Lord, renew, and let us keep in view the home where all thy people meet. When safe arrived at last, the thought of dangers past will serve to render home more sweet.

4. The prospect blessed is, no hope can equal this, to be for ever with the Lord, who died that we might be from sin and sorrow free, himself his people's great reward.
